10. Artikel di web vokasi UNAIR

The screenshot shows a news article from Vokasi News. The title is "How Indonesian Teens and University Students are Using Social Media to Master English". Below the title is a large image showing various social media app icons (Twitter, TikTok, WhatsApp, Threads, Snapchat) on a screen. The article text discusses how social media platforms like YouTube, Instagram, Discord, and TikTok are becoming essential tools for language learners. It highlights a recent study among students at Airlangga University and Indonesian teenagers on Discord servers, noting that 50% of participants strongly agreed that social media helps acquire new vocabulary. The article also mentions challenges such as distractions and privacy concerns.

VOKASI NEWS – In today's hyper-connected world, social media is more than just a space for sharing memes and staying in touch. Basically, it has quietly evolved into a vibrant, informal classroom for language learners. For Indonesian teenagers and university students, platforms like YouTube, Instagram, Discord, and TikTok are becoming essential tools for acquiring and practicing English outside the traditional educational setting.

A recent study conducted among students at Airlangga University and Indonesian teenagers on Discord servers reveals how deeply social media is woven into the fabric of language learning. Although, with participants spending an average of 4–6 hours daily on these platforms, and their engagement is not just social but increasingly educational.

However, the research also sheds light on significant challenges:

- Development of Language Skills: Platforms provide multifaceted exposure. YouTube was the most frequently used platform (76.3%), followed by Instagram (50%) and TikTok (28.9%) (Survey Results, 2025). This exposure enhances receptive skills (listening and reading) through videos and posts, and productive skills (writing and speaking) through comments and interactions. 50% of participants strongly agreed that social media helps acquire new vocabulary (Survey Results, 2025).
- Distractions and Time Management: The immersive, entertaining nature of platforms can lead to significant distractions. 52.6% of participants agreed that many distractions exist when learning English via social media. This "chronophagic" quality can displace academic priorities (Altam, 2020; Devi et al., 2019).
- Content and Privacy Concerns: Learners are exposed to unsuitable content, with 60.5% agreeing that inappropriate material is prevalent (Survey Results, 2025). Furthermore, privacy concerns and the commodification of user data create apprehension, potentially undermining trust in these as learning spaces (Jalal, 2012).

Conclusion

Social media has undeniably become a significant enabler of English language acquisition among Indonesian youth. It provides an accessible, engaging, and low-pressure environment that encourages autonomous learning and continuous practice. While challenges like technical limitations and content risks remain, the overall sentiment is clear. When used intentionally, social media is not just a tool for connection—it's a dynamic space for growth, learning, and linguistic empowerment.

After all, for a generation growing up online, the future of language learning may well be digital, interactive, and profoundly social.
